- After that, an investigating officer will be assigned to you, who will investigate your filed complaint.
- In most cases, the mobile number of the assigned investigating officer will be shared with the complainant via SMS or email.
- After that, the account of the suspected person will be put on hold, and debiting freeze of the bank account will be initiated by the concerned bank upon the direction of the investigating officer or agency.
- Information regarding the debit freeze on the bank account of the suspected person will be shared with you, including the remaining balance in that suspected account.
- Following that, the concerned officer will verify all transaction details with your filed complaint.
- Subsequently, whatever amount is left from the claimed amount in the bank account of the suspected person, the concerned officer will inform you.
- Following that, you will need to submit an application before the Hon'ble court having jurisdiction to address the matter.
- After filing the application, the court may request a status report from the concerned cyber police officer and take note of it.
- Then, the court will issue an order regarding your filed application for recovery and release of the frozen amount in the bank account of the suspected person, subject to terms and conditions, and as deemed just according to the law.

- If you don't get any status on your filed complaint via online tracking system of the concerned government department.

- You may also contact them through the provided number to inquire about the status of your filed complaint.

- If you don't receive any update on filed complaint or if bank account numbers of the suspected persons do not put on hold and debiting freeze is not stopped, you may file an RTI for seeking response.

- Address the appeal to the First Appellate Authority (FAA) of the concerned department.
- The FAA must dispose of the appeal within 30 days of its receipt.

3. SECOND APPEAL:

- If you do not receive a satisfactory response from the FAA or if your appeal is rejected, you can file a second appeal.
- File the second appeal within 90 days from the date on which the decision should have been made by the FAA or from the date of receipt of the decision.
- Address the second appeal to the State Information Commission (SIC) or the Central Information Commission (CIC), depending on the jurisdiction.
- The SIC or CIC will conduct a hearing and issue a decision within the stipulated time frame.

4. APPROACHING HIGH COURT:
